Notes on the paintings

My painting concurrently expresses contradicting themes in art. The goal is not to nullify these themes, not to mesh them together but to have them challenge each other.

I compel the accidental and the restrained to happen in a painting.

Marks on canvas are traces, vestiges of the act of painting and suggest spontaneous gestures that describe the image. In my work a library of stencils made of marks drawn from incidents, recollections and paintings assist in constructing a visual language.

The paintings are created by using, reusing and distorting these elements. This advances a visual comprehension that these paintings are not merely vestiges of a spontaneous or reasoned painting process, but a conclusive application of combining intuition with the rational, an intuitive painting constructed out of a formal process.

The foundation of my work is the interest in these shifts of comprehension and deciphering the many facets of reality in painting.
